

CONCLUSION

When I imagine the future for Nicaraguan women, I revisit what these women said to me, and picture a society where women do not live in fear or in feel a sense of shame. Instead, the women of Nicaragua see the hope for their futures. While they survived the depths of dictators, misguided leaderships, and a life changing Revolution, their perceptions continue to develop to benefit their cause. They proved the willingness, strength, and faith that all Nicaraguan women possess. They admit their faults, and plan for the next step. The women of Nicaragua demand to be heard, and will not stop until they feel the progress of women's rights in their communities and homes. Too many generations of Nicaraguan women have passed to not experience change, and for these women, the time has come.
