Introduction

The purpose of this bibliography and accompanying index map is to provide ready information concerning theses dealing with Oregon's geology in the hope that it will further research on geology of the State.

Information for this compilation was obtained by contacting a selected number of colleges and universities. Of 52 inquiries sent out, 17 reported at least one thesis, while 35 reported no theses. A complete tabulation of schools contacted follows the bibliography (see page 14). This sampling of the colleges is thought to represent more than 90 percent of the graduate studies made in the State. It was considered impractical to contact all colleges, therefore the possibility exists that some theses have been missed.

Most universities maintain interlibrary loan service, and persons desiring to consult any of the theses should make arrangements for borrowing them from their local university or state library.

Acknowledgment is gratefully extended to libraries, geology departments, and individuals for their cooperation in supplying the information.

It is intended that this publication be corrected and kept up to date, therefore any information that will help to make this list more accurate or complete will be greatly appreciated.
