Green OA

- Looking for an Open Access repository for your already-published article?
 - The Registry of Open Access Repositories (ROAR) includes links to and data about the repositories of the world (<http://roar.eprints.org/>)
- Want to make changes to your next Copyright Transfer Agreement?
 - From Science Commons, the Scholar's Copyright Addendum Engine lets you customize the addenda to your needs – not limited to self-archiving (<http://scholars.sciencecommons.org/>)
 - From SPARC (Scholarly Publishing and Academic Resources Coalition), Authors' Rights information and a pre-made addendum (<http://www.arl.org/sparc/author/addendum.shtml>)
- The SHERPA/RoMEO database provides information about the self-archiving policies of journal publishers (<http://www.sherpa.ac.uk/romeo/>)

OA, generally

- The SPARC website provides many resources on Open Access and scholarly communication trends and issues. (<http://www.arl.org/sparc/openaccess/index.shtml>)
- Peter Suber, who writes an Open Access blog and for the SPARC Newsletter also has developed specific resources for understanding Open Access, including his "Open Access Overview".
 - OA News Blog <http://www.earlham.edu/~peters/fos/fosblog.html>
 - OA Overview <http://www.earlham.edu/~peters/fos/overview.htm>
- Looking for an Open Access journal to publish your next article in?
 - Directory of Open Access Journals (DOAJ), provides a portal to scientific and scholarly journals online, free of charge to readers (<http://www.doaj.org>)
 - Includes links to 66 OA Geology journals from around the world
- Your Library is probably your best resource for information on Open Access including campus, institution, or organization initiatives and support.
